MISFORTUNES OF A BLACKSMITH Rebbed of $52 and Now Held as a Witness

Charles Knowlton, a blacksmith, Schenectady, N. Y., while coming to this city on the Albany boat Drew las night made the acquaintance of Anthony Bowers, of 231 West Twenty-seventh street, who was also a passenger. They had several drinks together, and, as they had several drinks together, and, as they had only deck tickets, they lay down on some bales of rags to sleep. Mate James Perdue while on duty saw Bowers go away twice from where Knowiton was lying, and after the second trip he did not come back again to that part of the boat. When the blacksmith awoke he found he had been robbed of $52. Suspicion was at once thrown on Bowers, and when the boat arrived this morning Detectives Mailon and Mc-Adam, of the Steamboat squad, arrested him.

When searched 5.75 in silver was all the money he had on his person. In the Tombs Police Court Justice Meade committed Bowers in $1,000 for the Grand Jury, and sent Knowlton to the House of Detention. Bowers, of 231 West Twenty-seventh

He thinks that he is able to take care of the water, but prominent physicians are of the opin on that none of physicians are of the opin on that none of take care of the water, but prominent physicians are of the opinon that none of the authorities is capable or handling the water question, and that it is on account of incompetency that the water is in its present deplorable condition.

"You can find substances of a foreign nature in water in any spot under the microscope," says Dr. Birdsail. "The present condition of the Croton water is simply caused by nature purifying the water and throwing to the surface the impurities, which, very naturally, are sent shoreward. This cleansing usually takes place at this time of the year."

A physician remarked to-day regarding this explanation that under these conditions nature was making a bigger effort for the benefit of mankind than she had ever been know to have made before.

Dr. W. E. Martin made another analysis to-day, and he will probably continue to report each day until it is finally.
